COOPERS HAWK

This photograph is of the North American Coopers Hawk. It is a specialist hunter of songbirds, especially in wood and scrubland. Other members of the hawk family are found in most regions throughout the world, with many of them facing survival difficulties.

Being top predators, hawks need healthy populations of prey species which they must continually 'harvest'. Therefore their habitat is of utmost importance. It follows that when the hawk's habitat is destroyed their food supply is decimated.

Moreover as hawks are often viewed as being similar to other birds of prey such as falcons, harriers, kites and eagles, they suffer persecution by farmers and gamekeepers. Policing the countryside can be a very difficult business for any law enforcement agency which means that huge amounts of crime is left undetected.

As human populations increase, they need more and more living space. This leads to extra housing and urban areas, as well as more agricultural land to feed the ever expanding towns and villages.

The present policy, which is ultimately unsustainable, is to use previous wilderness and wildlife areas.

Another problem exists. Despite being an offence, egg thieves continue to raid rare birds' nests for their eggs. Many eggs are sold on the black market for private and illegal collections.

FES is a member of the Partnership for Action Against Wildlife Crime (PAW), and supports the enforcement of wildlife law.

One major aim is to reduce the widespread persecution of birds of prey throughout the UK.

FES aims to continue its work in PAW, helping police and other law enforcement agencies such as Interpol. FES also wishes to work in partnership with the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES). In recent years, FES has had talks with CITES at the United Nation's Environmental Programme (UNEP) headquarters at Geneva.

Once this beautiful species has become extinct, it will have disappeared for all time. For them and us, there is no second chance.

Join us and be part of our active group of workers, friends and supporters in a charity where everyone is a volunteer.

Do you want to save one of these sensational animals from extinction? If so, sponsor one of our key species and you will be doing exactly that. It is not expensive to do so. You will also know that you are not a bystander, but are pitching in and making a difference.

You can congratulate yourself that the world will be a better place because of your help.

*"I've promoted the causes of these animals at the Houses of Parliament, the EU Parliament, and inside some United Nation's organisations. My work has only just begun as I feel that many animals are staring down the barrel of extinction every day."
"We can all make a difference!"*
